You direct the Sending Account, or delivering firm, to:

- Transfer your account to Betterment as you have instructed on this form, even though the Betterment Account may have a different account title or different taxpayer identification number than the delivering account.
- Deduct any outstanding fees from the credit balance in your account. If a credit balance does not exist or does not cover the balance due, liquidate assets in the account to the extent necessary to satisfy the balance due.
- Freeze your account when this transfer is validated, which includes canceling all open orders and not accepting new orders on the transferring account (except for transactions closing option positions that expire within seven days).
- Release any requested historical information to Betterment about the account you're transferring.
- Transfer any physical certificates in good deliverable form, including any necessary tax waivers.

You acknowledge and accept that:

- Any assets not readily transferable might not be transferred within the time frames set by FINRA (e.g., by FINRA Rule 11870) or other applicable authorities
- Betterment is not responsible for changes in the value of assets that may occur during the transfer process.
- You are aware of any tax or financial implications that may arise in connection with this transfer or with the sale or liquidation of any assets prior to transfer, including penalties, fees, financial losses, or losses of product features or benefits. You acknowledge that you have not received tax advice from Betterment. You should consult with a tax professional before signing this form.
- If an account transfers to Betterment with a debit balance, you are responsible for satisfying the debit balance.
- The account transfer to Betterment may result in the creation of a transferred securities account to hold assets that are not included in the Betterment portfolio.
- Betterment does not currently support partial ACATS transfers out of Betterment accounts. You should review carefully the information provided on this form to ensure that it accurately reflects the assets you wish to transfer, as it may not be technically feasible to reverse transfers made in error.

Last, you agree to indemnify and Betterment and its affiliates and their respective officers, employees, and agents (collectively, Betterment) harmless from and against any liability incurred by Betterment for relying in good faith upon the information provided in this form.
